THE STORY ABOUT HUMAN HOPE AND DREAM

Great goals often come with great challenges, but that does not mean they are not achievable. History and literature are full of examples of those who have succeeded through hard work. One of them is William Kamkwamba who lives in Malawi, Africa, where most people do not have access to electricity or running water. In 2001, when William was 14, life in Malawi became even more difficult. So, William's family could not afford to send him to school anymore.

However, William wanted to continue his education. He borrowed a book called Using Energy from the school library and became interested in windmills. He dreamt of building a structure with large metal pieces moved by the wind to produce power for getting water and electricity. William did not know much English, and he was not able to understand most of the book. But pictures and diagrams helped him plan his creation. When William started designing his first miracle, a lot of people in his village laughed at him. Yet, William did not let that stop him - he was confident. Using old metal, tractor and bicycle parts, nails and wire, William made a functional windmill for his family. Eventually, there was enough electricity for four lights and a radio.

As William was creative, he changed and advanced his design little by little. Later, he built a second windmill, which brought water up from underground. Soon, William began to teach other people how to build windmills. He also continued to build more of them himself, including one at a primary school. Because of his success, William was able to go back to school. Additionally, he contributed to cleaning water services in his community.

His invention opened new doors and opportunities. William has become an inspiration to many people around the world. Nowadays he is recognised by some organisations in America and South Africa due to his contribution in science. William is getting more and more involved in the community life raising awareness about knowledge and the importance of dreams. He is always surrounded by young Africans who work towards building a better future for Africa.

To share his uplifting experience with the world, William wrote a book about his life called The Boy Who Harnessed the Wind. It is a remarkable true story about human creativity, courage and ambition. This book will inspire anyone who doubts the power of an individual's ability to change a community and make people's lives better. Today he uses his website to educate people and give them hope. His main message is: "Trust yourself and believe. Whatever happens, don't give up."
